TRAMP IN COLD STORAGE

How a Hobo Was Trapped in Tucson.

Two days ago a refrigerator car was sidetracked in the yards of the Southern Pacific, the contents were removed, the ice which furnished the refrigeration was left in the car and the doors closed, says the Tucson Citizen. During the night a hobo came along and found the door unlocked. He crawled in and shut the door. An attendant in the yards stopped along a few minutes later and noticing the doors of the refrigerator car unlocked, proceeded to fasten them.

The hobo found the atmosphere of the car chilling and he tied up his head with rags from his dropping wardrobe which he packed in a large handkerchief. Without food and in the midst of penetrating cold this sole occupant of the refrigerator car remained until 12 o'clock today, when someone passing the car heard his cries. When the car was opened the scene presented was a frosty one to behold. The man's head and hands were wrapped in rags and he stood shivering before the stream of sunlight which shot into the car as the door was opened. Jumping from the car he muttered some incoherent words about the weather and drilled off up the track, tearing off with each step he took the rags which bound his face and hands. "Two days in a refrigerator car" is the title of this hobo's song and he sang it loud and long at the first back yard he entered.

CARNIVAL SPORTS.

The sporting part of the Phoenix carnival will be the most entertaining part of the week, and the bicycle race will be one of the chief features. There will be cowboy sports, baseball and other things, but nothing is attracting so much attention as the bicycle race. Mr. Javins, of the Bonie-Javins company, is managing the race, and it promises to be the greatest thing of the kind ever held in the territory. Members of the bicycle club are assisting Mr. Javins, and the officers of the race are Judge Stillwell and W. P. Mealey, judges; H. S. Griswold, starter; W. S. Beriman, C. R. Hughes and H. M. Chapman, handicappers. A steam automobile will pace the riders, and the contest should be worth traveling miles to see.

WINDOW GLASS WORKERS.

Pittsburg, Nov. 15.—If the plans of the promoters of today's conference of window glass workers carry, the result will be the formation of one of the strongest labor organizations in the country. At the opening of the conference in Turner hall this morning, there were present representatives of the blowers, gatherers, cutters and flatteners employed in many of the leading factories of the country. At present the four trades have four separate organizations, and the purpose of the organization is to discuss the proposal to amalgamate the four into one organization, which, it is believed, will be of benefit to all concerned.

In the lumber trade there are establishments.

STUART ROBSON

In "Oliver Goldsmith" at the Dorris Theatre Monday Night, Nov. 19.

It is conceded that Stuart Robson has a decidedly pronounced success in "Oliver Goldsmith," the new vehicle written for him by Augustus Thomas, who is responsible for several notable contributions to the lore of the native stage. The critics aver that this play bears every promise of becoming the best thing Mr. Robson has ever produced since Bronson Howard furnished "The Henrietta." The author of "Alabama" and "Arizona" and various other pieces of similar work, in "Oliver Goldsmith" has made a distinct departure from his familiar style. He is said to have penned a story of more than ordinary interest, and in a simple, direct and appealing manner. The Irish lad who composed "The Deserted Village," "The Viceroy of Wakefield" and "She Stoops to Conquer"—"the finest poem, the finest book and the finest comedy of his day"—is generally known through his distinguished contributions to literature, and because of the nature of an idol, in transposing the author from real life to the line back of the footlights, Mr. Thomas has not shattered the popular ideal, nor does Mr. Robson in his portrayal of the titular role. Good old "Noll" Goldsmith is painted by the dramatist much as he was in actual being—a charming fellow, most agreeable of companions; blundering, always voicing the wrong phrase at an inopportune moment, and yet always giving practical evidence of his largeness of heart. The presentation moves realistically and quickly, but without any semblance of tedium. If the work leaves one thought uppermost in the mind of the average auditor, that thought might be interpreted: "Here is a clean play, brilliant and sparkling and dainty in sentiment, but always clean."

Mr. Robson brings a notable company; in his support the principal players being Mr. John E. Henshaw, H. A. Weaver, Sr., Stephen Grattan, Beaumont Smith, Frank Robin and O. E. Hallam, Jefferys Lewis, Ellen Mortimer and Maude Whit. Seats on sale Friday.

Fifty of the most talented performers known to negro minstrelsy, and composing the Richards and Pringle's mammoth minstrel organization seen here at the Dorris theatre two nights, commencing Friday, November 16, will be seen here this season. The past excellent reputation of this immense attraction justifies lovers of good, substantial amusement an evening of royal entertainment.

Every feature in its lengthy programme is decidedly new and the organization comes "bigger, brighter and better than ever."

A carload of the most elaborate and costly scenery is carried for the presentation of each act. Thoroughbred Kentucky horses, handsome imposed English traps and two big brass bands appear each day in the parades given at 2:30 p. m.

Two magnificent Pullman and several baggage cars, owned and controlled by the company, are used in its transportation.
